WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT TRANSFER CREDITS

“Transfer credits” refer to courses taken at one institution that are credited toward a degree or diploma at another institution. Up to 10.0 transfer credits (or the equivalent of up to two years), may be applied to your honours degree at Trent University. There are three types of transfer credits:

- 1. Assigned Credits: An assigned credit is granted when the content of a course at another university or college is considered an exact equivalent to a course at Trent.
- 2. Unassigned Departmental Credits: An unassigned departmental credit is granted when the course materials from another university or college are comparable with the subject material in a discipline at Trent University for which there is not an equivalent course.
- 3. Unassigned General Credits: An unassigned general credit is granted when the subject of the course is not taught at Trent.

Note: All transfer credits are recorded as a “pass” grade. Numerical grades are not entered on the student record.

Transfer Tales

Top Ranked Student Experience

"I chose Trent because I knew it had a reputation for diversity and inclusivity. I also heard the student experience at Trent ranked at the very top of the list. Being an international student, I've always wanted to experience more Canadian culture, and Trent was the best fit. My experience so far has been the best. I have met so many friends through this journey. Trent also offers a lot of support for international students, and my professors are very approachable compared to a bigger school."

Jiahe Fan, Bachelor of Business Administration student, specializing in Accounting.

Embrace the Trent Community

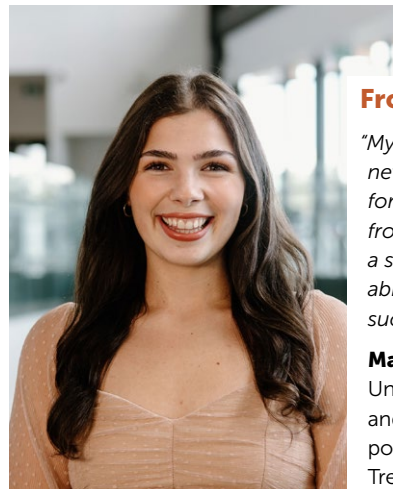

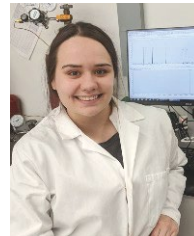

"I transferred to Trent Durham because it offers small class sizes, fostering a more intimate and supportive learning environment. Moving from a large university to Trent Durham's tight-knit community helped me develop meaningful connections with peers and faculty, enhancing my overall university experience."

Mathu Vijayakumar, Social Work student, encourages transfer students to engage with professors and peers, build connections by getting involved in the community, and embrace the welcoming environment.

An Award-Winning Decision

"Going to a smaller university came with a lot of benefits that impacted my journey as an early career scientist. Because the class sizes were small, I had access to state-of-the-art instrumentation to learn on and renowned researchers to learn from on a personal level. Not only are the professors incredibly knowledgeable, they are also very caring and friendly, and they really encouraged my success."

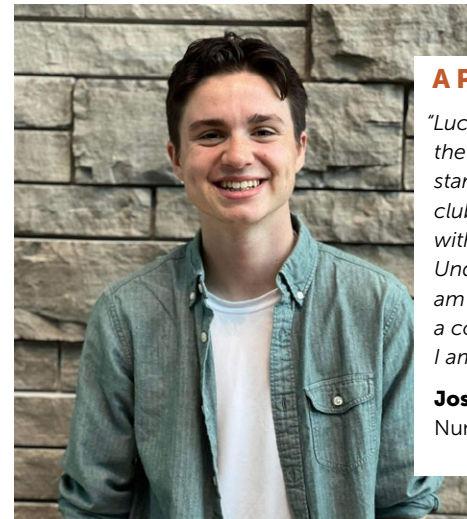

Cassandra Johannessen, B.Sc. Chemistry and M.Sc. Environmental & Life Sciences graduate. Cassandra transferred to Trent to access the most comprehensive mass spectrometry instrumentation in Canada at the Trent Water Quality Centre, and had an undergraduate research assignment published in a peer-reviewed journal. She was awarded the President's Medal, which recognizes academic excellence and achievement at the graduate studies level. Cassandra is continuing her career in research, now pursuing a Ph.D. in Chemistry.

From Transfer Student to Transfer Mentor

"My advice for future and incoming transfer students is to never hesitate to reach out and connect with faculty and staff for student support. I've learned that the support available from Trent Durham staff and faculty plays a crucial role in a student's mobility/transition between institutions and the ability to unlock your full academic potential for student success."

Maryam McManus' time as a transfer student at Trent University Durham GTA inspired her to want to work with and help students in higher education. It's what led her to a position as Articulation and Transfer Pathways Assistant at Trent Durham.

A Place to Belong

"Luckily for any student, the Trent community is one of the most welcoming communities you can join. When I started at Trent, I knew I wanted to become involved in a club or group at Trent to make friends and meet others with similar interests as me. I decided to join the Biology Undergraduate Society as a first-year representative; and am now the president of our club. I love being a part of a community that is as eager to learn and help others as I am."

Josh Russell, Conservation Biology student, travelled to Nunavut to conduct research after transferring to Trent.

Diploma to Doctorate

Trent alumna Kelly McLean's postsecondary journey started with an education pathway from Fleming College to a Bachelor of Science in Biology at Trent. Now, her academic career is steeped in science as she pursues her doctorate, working with the Canadian Wildlife Service to equip 80 cranes with transmitters to determine fine scale habitat use, migration timing and strategies, and help answer today's most pressing ecological questions.

"Science is all about asking questions, and I think that asking and answering relevant questions is very important in wildlife management. I was once told that in college, you learn what sort of things you can ask questions about; in your undergrad, you learn what sort of questions you can ask; in your master's, you learn how to ask those questions; and during your Ph.D., you actually answer the questions. It's true!"

Smooth Transition

"The Trent Durham and Durham College Social Work pathway allowed me to transition my credits and enter into my second year. It was convenient for me to attend Trent because of the pathway and the short distance from my home. I also attended a tour and was excited to hear about the Trent community and small classroom sizes. The transition from Durham College to Trent was smooth, and I was met with a warm welcome."

Taylor Uroda, Social Work student.

Continuing the Education Journey

Dayo Dixon went to college right after graduating high school. After a few years in her program, her life changed; she got married, had kids, and entered the workforce. After 23 years, Dayo decided to return to school and transferred to Trent University Durham GTA as a mature student.

"I thought I would feel out of place being a mature student. The truth is that there are all walks of life at Trent and it's a comfortable campus to be at... I love the experience so far. I have had amazing professors who have been motivational and made learning easy."
